Polish legions

During the Napoleonic period, many Polish soldiers, officers and volunteers emigrated, especially to France and Italy, where the Polish Legions were formed. Polish commanders included Jan Henryk Dabrowski, Karol Kniaziewicz, Jozef Wybicki and Antoni Amilkar Kosinski. It was then that the current anthem of Poland, the Dabrowski Mazurka, was created. It was created by Jozef Wybicki. It contains words promising the return of the Polish army from Italy to Poland.

Politics

Italy became one of Poland's main political and economic partners after the fall of the "Iron Curtain." The basis for the development of new forms and mechanisms of cooperation in Polish-Italian relations was created by the Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation concluded in 1991. Poland has become an important political and economic partner of Italy in the region over time, and Italy remains an important partner of Poland in the EU and in international forums, including NATO and the UN. Today, Poland and Italy have strategically close political relations. Cooperation is gaining momentum not only at the level of heads of state and government representatives. Inter-parliamentary contacts are also increasing. Their further development is to be facilitated by friendship groups in the parliaments of both countries.
